Brooklyn, March 30, 1835.

My dear Henry—

I regret to learn from Mr. Thompson, that our beloved coadjutors in the righteous cause of emancipation, Messrs. Cox and Leavitt, will not be able to visit Europe this spring—consequently, it will not be necessary for me to visit New-York until the annual meeting in May.

We are all well and happy here, wanting only your presence to complete the gratification that we feel.

Last evening, Mr. T. gave an excellent address on slavery in Rev. Mr. Tillotson's meeting-house, to a tolerably large audience.

To-morrow, Mr. May, Mr. Thompson, Helen and myself will leave for Providence, where we shall probably tarry until Thursday morning, and then start for Boston.

I feel rejoiced at the prospect of your being associated with Mr. May, in our anti-slavery office, after the annual meeting. Of course, if agreeable and convenient to you, Helen and myself desire to have you board with us.

Helen says that she and Mr. May, conjointly addressed a letter to me at New-York, the day before

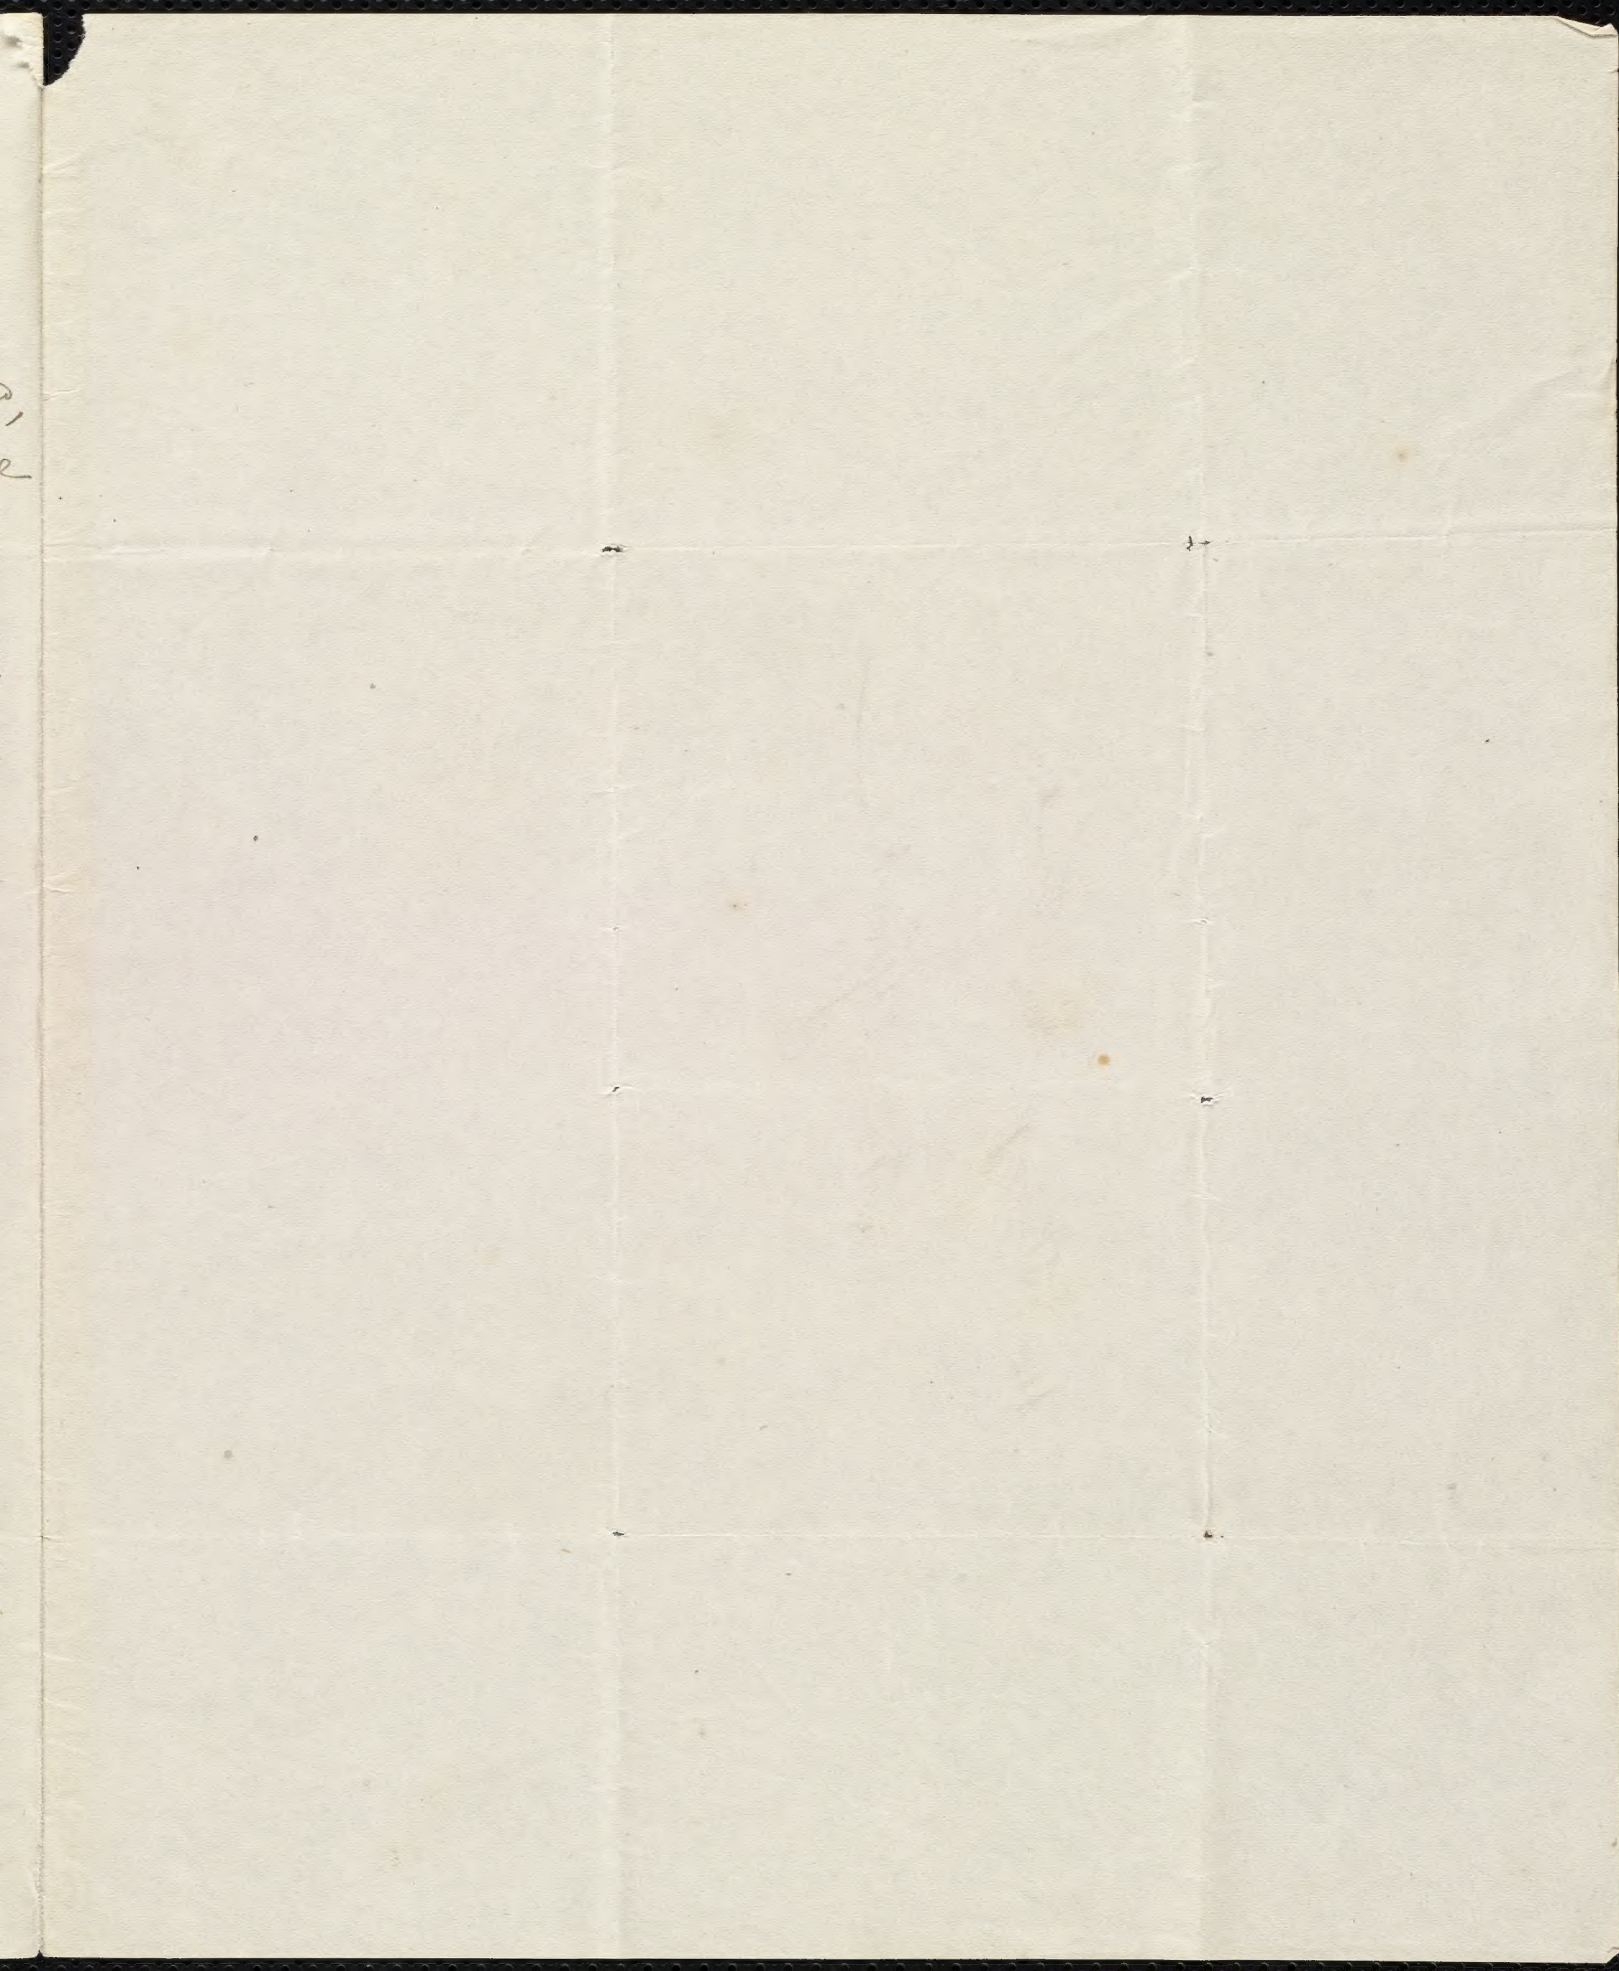

I arrived here. Pray, do me the favor to call at the Post Office and take it out, with any others that may happen to be there for me, and keep them until I see you, or until a private opportunity offers to send them to me.

I suppose you are sighing to see New-England, especially a little spot near Providence, which shall be nameless, and one who shall also be nameless. Possess your soul in patience a little while longer.

We have a driving snow-storm this morning.

Ever yours,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

Mr. Henry E. Benson,

New-York
